Bookstore has roots in bridge game

Nine women gave up cards to operate Bookworm 12 years ago

By Kimberly Heinrichs

An Upland bookstore has its roots in a bridge game.

Most of the nine Upland and Rancho Cucamonga women gathered that fateful day 12 years ago around a card game had been playing together since the early 1950s.

But that day they decided to work together instead.

"We'd all volunteered in the community for years," explained Jo Anne Chalfant, one of the partners. "We'd just volunteered ourselves to death and we just wanted to do something different."

Although none of them had any prior business experience, they managed to get the money together and make a go of it.

Today the store at 229 N. Second Ave. still is going strong. Three of the original women have left and a new one, Doris Anderson, has signed on.

Like the others, she started through an innocent game of cards.

Because the seven women divide the work among themselves, they never have had to hire employees. This has given them a financial boost on the path to success, they said.

"We've always operated in the black," said Mura Glenn, another partner.

At the end of each quarter the women get together and divide the profits according to the number of hours each has worked.

"We earned 17 cents an hour the first year," Glenn said, laughing. "But we are well above minimum wage now."

The women work an average of 60 hours a month. Although they all put in the same hours behind the counter in the store, they divide up the other duties according to skill and interest. That's how Glenn wound up the bookkeeper and Chalfant the buyer.

The store also has developed a large children's section. But the real emphasis of the store is service, the owners agree.

"We wanted someone to come in and say, 'I have a grandmother ... ' and we'd find a book for her," Chalfant said.

By Mike Krapfl

At the new 18,000-volume library in the Foothill Communities Law and Juctice Center the public will soon be free to peruse, pore over and ponder the newly stacked volumes.

The volumes include "everything that happened in United States law from 1789 to date," according to Duncan Webb, the director of the San Bernardino County Law Library.

When asked what a person might be able to use all that law for, Webb said "a person could learn to handle their own divorce, draft the documents to sell a house or even draft wills and trusts."

Webb, however, did have a caveat for any would-be lawyers using the facility: "Lay people doing legal paperwork by themselves are walking a tightrope."

Suzanne Oliver, the new facility's librarian, said that although her paralegal background helps her track down the necessary nook of needed information among the library's 4,700 square feet, it doesn't qualify her to give patrons legal advice.

"I can show people where to find what they need," she said, "but they have to decide whether what they see is what they want. Otherwise, it's a misdemeanor. I'm not a lawyer."

Oliver, who described the library's ground floor and mezzanine "a puzzle," said "we're no different than any other librarian. All we can do is tell people where to find things."

The second half of the "we" mentioned by Oliver is her assistant, Colleen Sayle. Webb said he hopes to staff the library with a second assistant by July..

H.O.T. Tips

(House of Tools)

Plastic backbone strips (sold by office-supply stores for binding reports) make inexpensive but effective sawblade guards. Cut a strip to length with a razor blade. If a longer strip is needed, epoxy two strips together using a short portion of strip for reinforcement at the joint. The backbone grips the blade and will not fall off easily; to remove the strip, just slide it forward.

Ordinary wax-based shoe polish makes a good stain and filler for open-grained woods such as walnut and oak. In a small jar, mix a chunk of polish with enough turpentine to liquify, then rub the liquid in and wipe off as you would with regular stain. This coating won't interfere with subsequent finishing and you can get a variety of colors.

Only memories remain of historic Grand Palace

By Andrew Horan and Lori Moody

Tears flowed from Helen Liddell's eyes last week as easily as fiery embers tumbled from the historic Grand Palace down to Euclid Avenue one night earlier that week.

Ontario Fire Department Inspector Floyd Clark said it could take at least a week before the cause of the fire might be known.

No one was injured in the 10:41 p.m. blaze. Earlier that day, police investigated a report of an open door in the vacant building. Officers found articles of clothing which indicated transients may have used the building to sleep in, according to police reports.

Later, firefighters secured the area to keep passers-by from walking through the rubble.

Liddell sold the building — where she offered antiques, served home-cooked meals for free and hosted piano- and banjo-players for 13 years — to developer Pat Olsen of Upland for $225,000 last October.

"It's really a shame," Olsen said. "It's so hard to believe ... downtown looks vacant without it."

Liddell felt such a personal loss when she learned of the 99-year-old building's destruction that she spirited away a chunk of charred wood from the site the afternoon following the fire.

"I did a bad thing," she said in a telephone interview from her new Covina antique shop that bears a familiar name: The Grand Palace.

"I took a piece of wood, one of the braces. It was laying there in the street (Monday). I don't know why I picked it up, but I did," she said.

The fire investigator apparently had no sympathy for Liddell's sentimentality.

"I've got to bring it back," she sighed.

But nothing will bring back the oldest commercial brick building in San Bernardino County or its fabled past.

The Grand Palace radiated a strange charm that drew West Valley and Southern California residents inside to commit wonderful — and wierd — acts.

"When it was brand new, there was a bank in the corner," recalled Bryce Denton, a history buff who has lived in Ontario for 52 years.

Seven years after the Ontario State Bank opened the city's first vaults, two strangers followed a Mr. Sipley into the bank, "bashed him over the head, jumped on Fred (the cashier), ... and made off with $3,000," according to an account related by Judy Evans of the city library's Model Colony Room.

The account even includes the fact that the bandits escaped by engaging the "fastest horse in Pomana" to pull their cart into the Chino Hills during a rain storm.

Around the turn of the century, a mechanic named Charley Lampkin built Ontario's first two automobiles in a first-floor room, Denton said.

A few years later, the Pacific Electric Appliance Co. began producing irons and other small appliances. The company grew to become Hotpoint.

By 1934, the company had moved out, grown and expanded to the point that they hired a young college graduate named

Officials will hire construction chief

The City Council had asked Maroney to investigate the legality of hiring a manager as an alternative to the traditional general contractor, he said.

The city expects to begin construction on its proposed $4.8 million facility in the 1400 block of West 13th Street in May.

Maroney said the construction manager method would give the city more control because the manager would discuss price offers on each part of the project with city staff.

"If they found one area that was way too high (in price), they could get the architect to change the materials," he explained.

But with the traditional general contractor method the city would give the contractor authority to hire all the subcontractors, Maroney said.

Former hostage to speak locally

David Jacobson, the last American hostage released from Lebanon, will be a featured speaker at the California Republican Assembly's quarterly meeting at the Ontario Hilton Jan. 16-18.

Jacobson will share the podium with KABC/Channel 7 News commentator Bruce Herschensohn during a banquet at 7 p.m., Jan. 17.

Harold Ezell, an Immigration and Naturalization Service commissioner, will address the assembly on the ramifications of the new immigration law during a noon luncheon Jan. 17.

No poison found in dog food tests

Local pet owner wants answers

By Mike Krapfl

Researchers have found no poisons in samples of a dog food suspected in the deaths of as many as 50 West Valley dogs, a state Department of Health official said last week.

Roland Morton, a program coordinator for the health department's Food and Drug Branch in Sacramento, said "we've finished our tests and we've found nothing."

Morton said more comprehensive tests are being done by the suspected dog food's Missouri-based manufacterer, Doane Products.

Officials in Doane's Joplin, Mo., headquarters and its San Bernardino branch office are vacationing and were unavailable for comment last week.

Morton said the results of the state's laboratory tests of the suspected dog food "are very, very puzzling. We have no idea what caused these dogs to die."

A batch of Doane's Real Life High Protein Dog Food manufactured in San Bernardino is the suspected cause of the liver failure in as many as 50 local dogs, according to area veterinarians.

Morton said Doane's effort to find the cause of the deaths "has been way more than we expected. They are making a legitimate effort to get to the bottom of this."

In early December, a toxicologist at the University of Missouri reported finding low levels of Aslatoxin in some samples of the suspected food. The toxin is known to attack the liver.

Asked when a cause for the deaths might be discovered, Morton said, "It's in Doane's court now."

Linda Marshall, an Ontario resident whose three cocker spaniels died after eating the food, said she had hoped to learn more from the state's report.

"I want to know what killed my dogs," she said. "I've been promised by Doane, but I've heard nothing."

Marshall has refused to accept Doane's offer of a settlement compensating her for the cost of the suspected food, the cost of the dogs' veterinary treatment and the cost of the dogs themselves.

"They (Doane) claim the dogs were just personal property," Marshall said. "But every time I go out in the yard and see those empty dog houses back there, I certainly don't think I'm missing property."

Vandersall to lead schools committee

Donna Vandersall of the Upland Unified School District board of trustees was elected chairwoman of the county Committee on School District Organization at its annual reorganization meeting.

The meeting was held at the Roy C. Hill Education Center Dec. 10. Elected as vice chairperson was Elvin Ricks, an aide to Assemblyman Gerald Eaves, D-Rialto.

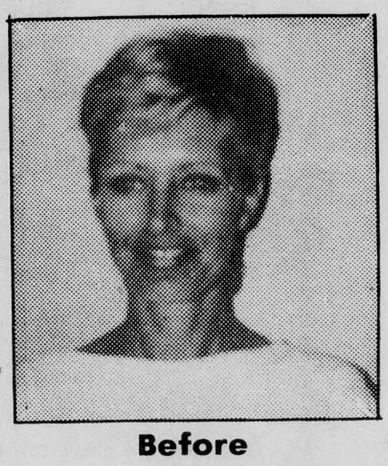

The committee studies and makes recommendations to the state Department of Education in the areas of the organization and reorganization of school districts, the transfer of territory between school districts, and the number of trustees and the manner by which they are elected.

Bryce Denton from Los Angeles.

But the old building, which was placed on the National Register of Historic Places Jan. 8, 1982, continued to host a variety of activities.

"One friend of mine rented a room upstairs for a year or so, maybe in 1915," Denton said.

"To take a bath, he had to go up A Street (now Holt Boulevard) to a barber shop.

"There were no baths in many of the rooms," he added.

Downstairs, a newspaper called the Ontario Record began publication.

But his wife soon discovered the hot-blooded tryst and stopped it with the cold lead of a Colt .45.

Ever since, shades of the man and "an evil woman" stalked tenants, until Liddell hired a psychic in 1985.

"She told us she exorcised the evil woman — and she said we've been calling him (Charlie) by the wrong name," Liddell said.

"His name was Thaddeus," she added.

Psychics may have successfully reconstructed the fable; last week's fire dashed all hopes of renovating the boarded building.

Once the California Department of Transportation began its work to carry Euclid under the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroad tracks in 1982, Liddell's eight-shop "antique mall" quickly died.

"I tried to hold out on my own but I just couldn't do it," Liddell said.

Then Eugene Ephrat and Olsen approached Liddell with a $1.5 million plan to buy the building, renovate it, and open a restaurant downtairs and offices upstairs.

Olsen said she is insured for the loss but is uncertain what will happen to the property.

"We are re-evaluating all the options," she said. "We are saving all the pieces of the building, the bricks, that are saveable."

Olsen and Liddell agreed that despite dollars, the building and their dreams for it were priceless.

Alta Loma mules ridden in annual Rose Parade

By Mike Krapfl

Alta Loma and the Tournament of Roses Parade have something in common. They've got mules.

Alta Loma's Joker B's Jigsaw and Joker B's Jitterbug were to join nine other mules as the first-ever of their species ridden in the Rose Parade last week.

The mules, undoubtedly, left traces of Alta Loma's trademark equestrian lifestyle behind as they cautiously navigate the nationally televised parade route.

It, after all, is caution and dirt that characterize the rabbit-eared hybrid of horse and donkey, according to Jigsaw's rider, Janet Luke. It's not stubborness.

As partners in a breeding business, LNL Appa-Mule, the two Alta Lomans breed mules at the Lemon Tree Ranch on 19th Street.

They joined other members of the National Donkey and Mule Society in the 16th position of this year's Rose Parade.

"That," Lowry said, "is such a thrill for us. We've never been in the Rose Parade and neither have mules."

When asked to explain, the two riders said mules are noted for their strength, stamina, sure-footedness and easy-on-the-behind gait.

Mules are sterile, they explained. The only way to produce one is to breed a male donkey — called a jack — with a female horse.

In another bizzare twist of lineage, Luke said "George Washington is the father of the mule in the United States."

Washington, she explained, received a gift of mules from the King of Spain. Once Washington learned of their usefulness on the field and under the saddle, he became America's first breeder of the hybrid.

New elementary school to open its doors in September

By Marianne Aiken

A new elementary school will open in September in Rancho Cucamonga's Central School District.

Called Coyote Canyon, the kindergarten-through-sixth-grade school will house 300 students in 10 portable classrooms at Terra Vista Parkway and Spruce Avenue in the Terra Vista Planned Community.

Eventually a permanent school will be built at the site, said Patt Hatcher.

Hatcher will be the school's principal but is now the district's director of curriculum.

The school is being paid for through an agreement with Lewis Homes, developer of Terra Vista, an 8,000-unit planned community.

A little more than half of Terra Vista's homes, apartments and condominiums will be built within the boundaries of the Central School District.

The district in 1983 withheld certification which would have allowed the developer to begin construction, pending an agreement which ensured that there would be enough schools to house the children generated by the project.

After 17 months of fine-tuning, a facilities agreement was worked out between the district and the developer in 1984.

Lewis Homes is supposed to provide two elementary school sites with relocatable classrooms and offices, equipment, furniture, playgrounds and the like, plus interim junior high facilities.

In exchange, Lewis Homes got a refund of fees paid for units already under construction, according to the agreement.

There also will be a school in the portion of Terra Vista which falls in the Etiwanda School District.

The school district's master plan calls for enrollment to grow from the current 3,200 students to 4,939 by the 1990-91 school year, Hatcher said.

"We will be absolutely filled up at 5,200 students," Hatcher said. "The district will be built out."

Upland students asked to choose their high school

By Marianne Aiken

Upland students who go to Montclair and Chaffey high schools are being asked to choose whether they want to check out Upland High School or stay where they are.

About 560 high school-aged Upland students who attend Montclair and Chaffey high schools won the right Nov. 4 to start going to Upland High School next year.

A 52 percent majority of voters in five West Valley communities voted to pluck Upland High School out of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District and put it in with the rest of Upland's schools, creating the Upland Unified School District.

The district will come into being July 1.

"We received a list from the Chaffey district of all the kids who live in Upland who go to Chaffey and Montclair high schools," said P. Joseph "Joe" Lenz, a member of both the Upland Unified and Upland School District boards.

It will be up to the high school district to accept the students from that list who want to continue to attend Chaffey district high schools.

The high school district board decided Dec. 1 to accept all of next year's Upland seniors who want to go to Chaffey and Montclair, but not their younger brothers and sisters, without special permission.

Students who will not be seniors next year who want to go to Chaffey or Montclair will have to have a better reason than wanting to stay in school with their friends in order to be readmitted, Chaffey board members said.

Students who decide to try out Upland High School will have Glenn Fisher as their principal.

"There are a lot of things we could do to make it a model school in the state," Fisher said a few weeks ago.

6 West Valley students graduate from Cal Poly

The degrees were conferred by the university's president, Dr. Warren J. Baker, during a morning ceremony held Dec. 13, in the physical education building gymnasium on campus.

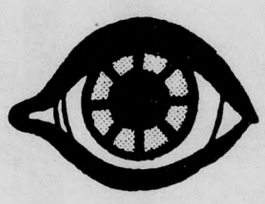

Dr. Robert E. Kennedy, president emeritus of the university, delivered the commencement address.

The 863 students who had completed requirements for their degrees and certificates during the fall quarter included 35 candidates for master's degrees, 816 for bachelor's degrees, and 12 candidates for technical certificates. Nine of the bachelor's degree candidates received degrees with double majors.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Upland musician prefers toe-tapping Dixieland jazz

By Suzanne Sproul

He said he doesn't criticize modern music, he simply doesn't understand it.

"Jazz is a happy music. It makes you feel good to play it and it makes the audience happy to hear it," he said with a slight grin.

Anderson is an amateur musician who took up playing instruments when his aunt's music store closed. She brought some instruments home to young Anderson and a lifelong love blossomed.

Anderson plays the clarinet and saxophone. At one time he performed with the Nightblooming Jazzmen, which have appeared locally.

"I never learned how to read music," he said.

But the retired Montclair postal worker never let that stand in his way. He's enjoyed listening to and playing jazz all his life. For the past 24 years, he's been a member of the Society for the Preservation of Dixieland Jazz Inc., which meets twice a month in Riverside and West Covina.

The group's motto of sorts is to meet informally to socialize, dance and enjoy music as played during the 1930s and 1940s.

"I started going to the Storyville, a beer joint in Pomona. Bill Bacin was the founding member, but when the place closed we had to go elsewhere," he said.

Afterward the fledging club tried meeting and performing in various West Valley locations. Now the group meets the second Sunday of the month at the Riverside Moose Hall and the fourth Sunday of the month at the West Covina Elks Club.

Members and visitors are invited. Members pay $1 and visitors are charged $2 per 4-hour meeting.

A year group membership is $6 per person or $10 per couple.

The local chapter of the society has 675 members in and around the West Valley.

Air fair scheduled at Cable Airport

The Pomona Valley Pilots Association will present its 12th annual Pomona Valley Air Fair this weekend at Cable Airport at the northwest corner of 13th Street and Benson Avenue in Upland.

An 8 a.m. pancake breakfast will kick off the festivities Saturday and Sunday, with the air show beginning at 10 a.m. and running until 4 p.m. both days.

Flying demonstrations will include aerobatics, helicopters, parachute jumping and radio-controlled model airplanes. Introductory airplane and helicopter rides will be available.

Highlanders third in Blackwatch mat tournament

By RICK WHITED
The Daily Report

When a number of teams failed to renew their contracts to compete in the annual Upland Blackwatch Wrestling Tournament, tournament director and Upland head coach Mike DeShayne decided to switch to a team rather than individual format this year.

Little did DeShayne know, however, that by turning the tournament into a 10-way he was playing right into the collective hands of the revamped program at Fontana High School.

Relying on consistent, though not spectacular strength throughout their lineup, the Steelers rolled to a perfect 8-0 record through the two-day tournament and captured the team title last Saturday night with a 36-27 win over DeShayne's third-place Upland team.

"I won't complain about it at all," said Deshayne afterward. "Actually, I prefer this type of tournament and I think most coaches do. When you wrestle round-robin duals, your wrestlers are guaranteed matches. Before, an average wrestler could wrestle one match and be gone. I'll take third place against these teams any day."

University finished second in the tournament with a 7-1 record, with Upland at 6-2 and Eisenhower at 5-3. Other West Valley teams in the tournament included Montclair, which finished sixth at 3-5, and Chino, which finished eighth at 1-6-1.

But it was Fontana which stole the spotlight, a spotlight that just a year ago would have been as attainable as a ticket to the NCAA Final Four. The Steelers didn't pull it off without a hitch, losing to Apple Valley 30-28 in an exhibition after the Sun Devils forfeited all their matches by failing to show up for the first day of competition.

"It's hard to say whether we could have won it with Apple Valley in it," said first-year Steeler coach Ralph Burris. "They beat us today, but you just don't know how they would have competed over the long haul. But we'll take it. The kids really earned this one."

Hitch or no, the real story is that Burris won the tournament with a lineup that included nine sophomores. But it's a lineup that performed consistently in the team format. Only one Steeler, Bill Poindexter, won the individual title of his weight class, but his supporting cast made the difference. Steve Johnson (100) finished second behind upper weight tournament MVP Steve Johnson of Eisenhower, while Sam Archuleta (107), Jason Cox (114), Ruben Gonzales (121), Jodi Panatoni (156) and Orlando Salazar (177) all placed third in their classes.

"We don't really do that well in the individual tournaments," Burris said. "We're not real experienced and we struggle at them. But we're a good dual meet team so this type of tournament suited us just fine. We kind of came through the back door this year, but with all the youth we have, we'll definitely be coming through the front door next year."

Fontana was impressive throughout the tournament, crushing Norco, Ramona, La Sierra and Citrus Belt League foe Ike through the first four rounds. The Steelers then knocked off University 36-28, pounded Montclair 44-24 and polished off the title with the win over Upland. Close as that score was, the Steelers had wrapped up the match by the 167-pound class with a 36-14 lead.

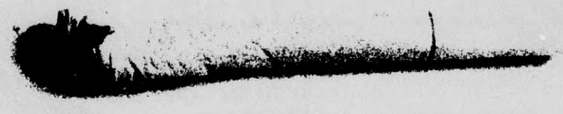

Upland, meanwhile, finished up with two individual champions and four second-place finishers. Louie Hernandez (193) and Mike Tieman (Hvy), who improved to 25-5 for the year, both won their weight classes, while Lam Duong (107) lost for the first time this year (32-1) and finished second along with Gi Kim (147), Eric Hartman (167) and Marty Abeyta (177). Abeyta, who wrestled for Chino last year, went 7-1 in his first full tournament since undergoing knee surgery.

While Montclair suffered a rather poor team showing, the Cavaliers finished up with more individual champions — three — than any other team in the tournament. Mike Atkins (147) improved to 24-5 on the year in winning his title, while Scott Atkins (156) also won his class title and improved to 26-1. Daren Ricks (177), meanwhile, stayed perfect on the season (27-0) and was named the lower weight MVP for the tournament.

"We have some inexperience at the lower weights so we struggle as a team," said Cavalier head coach Bob Bellot.

Vince LaFarge gave Chino, the defending Blackwatch champions, its best showing in what's turned out to be a rebuilding year as he captured the individual title at 128 pounds. Ron Velarde (147), meanwhile, took a third place and Joe Velarde (156) tied for third in his weight class.

Claremont man, Salvadorans search for peace

By Elissa Cottle

A Claremont man was one of 175 Americans who met with some 200 Salvadorans recently to discuss ways to end the six-year civil war which has claimed some 60,000 lives in the small Central American country.

Louie Duran of Claremont, a Los Angeles County probation officer supervisor and president of a 24,000-member county employees union, attended the two-day conference in San Salvador last November entitled "U.S.-El Salvador: In Search of Peace."

The American delegation included union activists, clergymen, church workers, community leaders and representatives of four U.S. congressmen. The conference, hosted by the Federation of Salvadoran Trade Unions, was held at the University of Central America.

At the end of the meeting, delegates from both countries pledged to support the:

- Stop of U.S. military financial aid to the government of El Salvador.
- Start of dialogue between the government, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) — the forces fighting the Salvadoran military — and "all sectors of Salvadoran society."
- Move to free political prisoners and those jailed for their association with unions and account for the thousands who have disappeared.
- Requirement that the government meet the needs of the victims of the Oct. 10 earthquake and to distribute the earthquake relief aid from other countries.

Duran, 51, said he met many Salvadorans who told of being arrested without charges, tortured in jail and generally intimidated by the Salvadoran military which has a strong influence on civilian government headed by President Napoleon Duarte.

He said he spoke with people there who saw their family members and neighbors shot and killed by Salvadoran military troops because they were accused of subversive activity.

Duran said he also saw rural areas destroyed by the earthquake that had not been cleaned up and rebuilt. And he met an American woman who works for a Salvadoran church who said she saw military men throw food off truckloads that was intended for the earthquake victims.

"When I was growing up, as a student they taught us about a country that believed in democracy. A country that believed in a self-determination of the people, based on the principles of justice and freedom," said Duran, speaking of his American history lessons.

"I'd like to see our government acting on the principles it claims to believe, what it says in the Constitution. I believed it as a kid. I don't want to see our government subverting the will of the people (of El Salvador) because we don't believe in them economically," he said.

"I was taught that right makes might, not the other way around," he added.

Brad Smith, an aide to Rep. David Dreier, R-33rd Dist., said U.S. policy in El Salvador is sound because "we've seen great strides in the last few years under the Duarte government to correct violations of human rights."

He added, "There needs to be more improvement and the administration is much concerned about these allegations and wants to make sure no one's human rights are violated."

He said the "U.S. is applying pressure, certainly (to stop the violations)." But the purpose of the Salvadoran military aid "is strategic to U.S. defense in protecting our borders."

The United States has given the El Salvadoran government $500 million in military and economic aid every year since 1981 and President Reagan has requested $514 million for 1987 aid, according to Isidro Gomez, an aide to Rep. Don Edwards of California, D-10th Dist., who attended the conference in El Salvador.

Gomez said it was unlikely the U.S. would quit aiding El Salvador because the FMLN — a guerrilla organization of Marxists — Christian Democrats and Social Democrats, "has pretty significant support" and may be able to topple the El Salvadoran government if U.S. assistance was halted.

But Gomez said Edwards is among a core of legislators attempting to create "a more reasonable policy toward El Salvador."

He said Edwards is concerned about "holding the Salvadoran government accountable for human rights violations."

Gomez said he discussed the problems in the country with a member of the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) in El Salvador, an organization that investigates political crimes.

He said Gary Herbertson, an AID staff member, told him that El Salvador's "judicial system is pretty much non-existent."

Gomez said Herbertson told him "there's no keeping track of evidence," such as fingerprints, tire marks and photographs, among Salvadoran prosecutors and they "depend on depositions and confessions."

Gomez referred to the well-known story of Elmer Gonzalez Araujo, a Salvadoran military officer who is said to have ordered 200 soldiers into the village of Las Hojas and executed 74 people on Feb. 22, 1983.

Gomez said U.S. and El Salvador officials set up an investigation of the massacre and he spoke to U.S. Embassy members in El Salvador about the progress of the inquiry. "I think they are making an effort, but it's going to take a long time before they really make progress," he said.

Duran said he visited the scene of the Las Hojas executions and talked to some of the widows and others who witnessed the killings.

Duran also recounted the story told by Umberto Centenos, a Salvadoran union leader who spoke at the conference.

A year ago, Centenos and his two sons, ages 18 and 21, were arrested. Centenos said he was held for five days and tortured.

He then was released but his sons have remained in prison. Centenos said he was offered the release of his sons in exchange for his cooperation with the government. But he refused. He said his sons eventually confessed to terrorist acts they didn't commit after being tortured.

Duran said the described torture methods usually leave no scars.
